You can find free boat model plans online. That's what I've been able to find so far of decent quality. I've tried very hard to filter out sites that seem suspicious in terms of copyright infringement - I'm trying to hold the standard high. The Fregate plan from architect F. H. Chapman navalis Mercatoria is available as a free download of images from ChapmanNet. Free 18th Century Ship Plans from ChapmanNet Architect navalis Mercatoria By Fredrik H. af Chapman is available online for free from ChapmanNet. The ship's plans are excellent and a great reference. This is probably the best collection of 18th century ship plans anywhere. There is no tampering shown in this book, so you have to find that elsewhere. This should not be a big problem as there are many specialized books on the subject. The book consists of 62 plates (a total of 145 plans for 18th century ships, complete with sections and common locations typical of the time. Many of them can be purchased through my architectura Navalis Mercatoria page. Free ship plans Orlogsbasen.dk Orlogsbasen is a search, an online database of the ship's plan provided by the Danish National Archives and the Royal Danish Naval Museum. that the institutions involved have. The database is under construction. Free model boat plans Mo-Na-Ko.net Czech MoNaKo is also a hobby and model magazine builder. They offer three page plans - only two of which are currently available. The quality of the proposed plans varies, so carefully examine them and do your own due diligence. Items range from battleships, destroyers, cruisers, submarines, sailing boats, motorboats, tugboats, etc. Some show construction details, while others seem to be missing pages, some of them explicitly designed for RC, and all in Czech. Enjoy! //www.mo-na-ko.net/lode-planky2.htm Free model PT Boat Plans from Pt-boat.com If you want to build a scale design model for the planning corps, consider the PT boat. The abbreviation means Patrol Torpedo, and it was the U.S. response to what is otherwise known as a motor torpedo boat. For plans and all you need to know to build a model of one of them, go to PT-boat.com Free German Warship plans from The Dreadnought project offers 300dpi scans of original plans from German warships from the imperial era to World War II. Most have oddball ships that most have never heard of. Plans can be one sheet on multiple mock decks, profiles profiles cross-sections. In my opinion, there are no plans for lines. However, an extremely valuable resource if this is your area of interest. French warship Plans from the French Ministry of Defense I was never under the impression that the French government was all that useful to its citizens until I came across this site. I found two catalog plans useful for modeling shipbuilders: Wooden warships, mostly French, but also some foreign states. Warships made of iron and steel, the late 19th century, both world wars, the Cold War, etc. Plan sets are not always complete, but most of them provide more than you would expect to create a boat model. They offer plans for all kinds of ships such as line ships, frigates, battleships, cruisers, destroyers, submarines, carriers and torpedo boats. Some surprises include tugs, minesweepers, amphibious assault ships, steam frigates, etc. site, as well as plans in French, so keep in mind. Note: This service has been disrupted. I don't have any further information at this time. If anyone knows what's going on, please give me a note here and I'll put it on this page. Thank you. Albion - 18th century merchant ship Albion Plans 1.9mb in PDF format - 39 pages, Instructions only in Italian. Building a model The craft building model of the ship in the traditional way using Plank on the frame building is a very satisfying way to make a model sailing ship - you can see the skill and time spent when spectators or spectators photograph to build a kind of progress. Time should be spent on each view of each planning and deciding which construction method is best for each sailing ship model - for example, if you want to add radio gear to make a radio-life sailing ship, you should avoid creating a solid hull. The board on the frame body may be subject to flooding if additional buoyancy is not added. A good method for building RC Ship hulls is to create a bread-and-butter case by cutting the correct hole in each layer to provide ample space for RC and servos to control the steering wheel and sails. HMS Alderboran 1790 Alderboran Plans 750kb in PDF format - 26 page tile plans with instructions in English Brigantine Details and free plans for RC Ship Plans Page 1 This ship was built using polystyrene foam shaped hull. The foam is easy to resurface into the mold with an electric machine grinding, and this is then used as a former fiberglass lay and Epoxy resin to make the GRP case. Do not use polyester resin, as it will melt the foam on contact. The epoxy glass case can be sanded flat using a plastic filler to fill any depression left by Matting glass to weave. This makes it an extremely strong, washless body. Income Cutter - Warning 1818 Alerts 1818 Plans in PDF format, tiled in 36 pages - 1.3mb in size with instructions in English All models of sailing ships are complex builds due to the amount of rigging required for sails - this becomes extremely difficult if you are considering a fully steered sailing ship with multiple masts.
